From Sarah Clayton: "I am still working full time as a psychotherapist at Psych Care Assoc. PC in Ludlow, MA, and traveling back and forth between Warsaw, Poland, and Seattle, WA. One of my four sons lives in Warsaw with his wife and two sons. Another son lives in Seattle with his wife and two sons. My other two sons live in Springfield, MA. Trips to Manhattan to the Met for opera also keeps me busy. Hopefully, I will make our next reunion." [Sarah roomed with Anne Merchant Boesgaard for three years at MHC and reaffirms she is 'so proud of her' for earning the American Astronomical Society's lifetime achievement award, noted in this year's spring Quarterly.]

Anne Strauss writes, "In June I exchanged apartments with a friend in Paris and enjoyed living as I imagined I would if I were actually French – in markets, cafés, gardens, museums, outings with friends. In fact, the month turned into a moveable mini-reunion. I spent time with Louise Weintraub, who lives in Paris and was preparing to spend the summer at her home in Hyannis. Louise and I also got together with Barbara Lahage, who had come to Paris for a week to celebrate her birthday. Carol Bloomberg Glassheim joined me in the apartment for the last ten days of my exchange. Carol and I then traveled on together to Copenhagen, where neither of us had ever been. We rented an apartment for a week and explored the city, learning our way around as we went: the Tivoli Gardens; the 'alternative' community of Christiania; and the nearby Louisiana Museum of Modern Art. We ate more delicious smørrebrøds than I can count." [When Anne goes home, it's to the Upper East Side of Manhattan where she's lived since deserting Washington, D.C. in 1982. Another editorial note: For those who may have murky thoughts about smorrebrods, they are a Scandinavian specialty-- carefully composed open-faced sandwiches on dense, dark bread.]

Classmates-- please send me your news for the Quarterly-- my inbox and mailbox are developing cobwebs...
